RURAL HEALTH IN THE NEWS

St. Johns River Rural Health Network Receives Health Resource and Services Administration Planning Grant

The SJRRHN received an award of $100,000 for one year of planning activities in Putnam County. The SJRRHN looks forward to the upcoming year with its partners the Health Planning Council of Northeast Florida and SMA Behavioral in addressing behavioral health care access.

Study shows efficacy of using AI, EHRs to help guide radiation therapy

Researchers from the Cleveland Clinic developed an artificial intelligence-based neural network to help determine the most effective dosage for radiation therapy by leveraging the EHRs and medical scans of patients with lung cancer. The findings, published in the Lancet Digital Health, showed that the AI neural network was able to reduce the probability of radiation treatment failure to under 5%.
